Krings to Further Strengthen Company's Standing as a Top Minnesota Workplace

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 13, 2018 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Tactile Systems Technology, Inc. ("Tactile Medical") (Nasdaq: TCMD), a medical technology company focused on developing medical devices for the treatment of chronic diseases at home, today announced that Juleen Krings has joined the company as Chief Human Resources Officer (CHRO).

Krings will focus on further strengthening a company culture of engagement and empowerment that has established Tactile Medical as one of the Star Tribune's top workplaces for nine consecutive years. In directing and executing human resources (HR) strategy, she will lead training and development, talent acquisition and team-building aimed at delivering strong business and customer satisfaction results.

Throughout her 20 years in human resources, Krings has acquired extensive global HR leadership experience in multiple sectors and a track record of contributing to growth and profitability. Most recently, as CHRO for AnchorBank, NA, she created and directed a values-based leadership program that fostered business momentum across the organization's 18 branch locations.

"Our customer-centric culture is the foundation of our success," said Gerald R. Mattys, Chief Executive Officer of Tactile Medical. "As we continue to grow, it's critical for us to provide a work environment that empowers our team to reach their utmost potential while delivering outstanding customer satisfaction at every point of contact. Juleen's broad experience and passion for employee engagement make her ideal to lead this effort."

"I'm thrilled and honored to join Tactile Medical," said Krings. "Rarely have I seen a company so sincerely dedicated to its customers and employees. It's exciting to be part of a team that makes such a meaningful difference in the lives of people with chronic disease and takes such great satisfaction in this Mission."
